Pre-reading

Positive mental health means striking a balance in all aspect of one’s life: social, physical, spiritual, emotional, economic and mental. Maintaining a healthy balance in these areas means staying mentally healthy or having good mental health. When this balance is disrupted or distorted it can often be a challenge to regain a healthy balance again. http://www.albertahealthservices.ca/2745.asp

Many new immigrants to Canada experience a number of challenges when settling into their new home. These challenges could result in mental health problems such as stress. Some new immigrants have experienced traumatic events in their lives before moving to Canada. These traumatic events such as war can also lead to mental health problems. Knowing where to turn for help is important in addressing mental health challenges.

Pre-reading questions/ Food for thought

Can you think of one example in each aspect on one’s life that could lead to an imbalance in life? The aspects of one’s life are social, physical, spiritual, emotional, economic and mental.
Main Reading

Title: Mental Illness

As you read the selection, use context clues to help you figure out the meaning of the following words that you will come across: biological factors, genetics, nervous breakdown, chemical imbalance, debilitating

Reading Strategy Tip: The main idea is the most important idea in a paragraph. One sentence in a paragraph often states the main idea. This sentence can appear anywhere in the paragraph. The other sentences in a paragraph usually give details that tell more about the main idea. You can find the main idea sentence by asking yourself “Which sentence tells me what the paragraph/section is about”. As you read each section of the selection, identify the sentence that is the main idea of each section.

1 Definitions taken from www.learnersdictionary.com
What is mental illness?

Mental illness is not a single disease but a broad classification for many mental health problems. A mental health problem might also be described as a mental disorder, poor mental health, psychiatric illness, nervous breakdown and burnout, to name a few.

Mental health problems are health conditions that are characterized by alterations in thinking, mood, or behaviour (or a combination of these) associated with distress and/or impaired functioning.

How many people are affected by mental illness?

Mental health problems cause major changes in a person’s thinking, emotional state and behaviour, and disrupt the person’s ability to work and carry on their usual personal relationships.

Mental health problems affect more people than imagined. One in three Canadians will experience a mental health problem at some point in their life. One in five Canadians will experience a mental health problem over the course of a year.

The World Health Organization (WHO) has stated that six out of the 10 leading causes of ‘years lived with disability’, in developed regions, are mental health diagnoses.

What are the more common types of mental health problems?

There are many different types of mental health problems. Some common ones are depression and anxiety.

Depression affects approximately two million Canadians 20 years and older at some point in their lives. Depression often occurs with other mental health problems and with physical illnesses such as coronary heart disease, stroke and physical disabilities. There are approximately 2.5 million Canadians 20 years and older who live with an anxiety disorder.

Schizophrenia and bipolar disorder (manic depression) are less common but can be debilitating to the persons experiencing them.

What causes mental illness?

Mental illness has no single cause. However, it is most likely several factors together that lead to mental illness. For example, recent evidence has shown that many of the major mental illnesses involve chemical imbalances in the body.
Mental illnesses are:
- biological - linked with disturbances in the brain or other body-system chemistry,
- psychological, linked with disturbances in thought or emotion,
- and social, linked with life events and stresses.

Mental health professionals account for all three areas of a person’s life when they design a plan for dealing with the illness.

Biological factors that may affect whether someone becomes seriously mentally ill include:
- Pre-natal damage
- Birth trauma
- Viral infection
- Brain chemistry

Genetics may play a part, too. Studies show that close relatives of someone with schizophrenia or an affective disorder are much more likely to have the same illness. However, people don’t inherit the illness itself. They just inherit the tendency to get it.

Psychological and social factors could include:
- lack of support from relationships
- family violence
- major changes in life
- child abuse
- unemployment

The above information has been adapted from the Canadian Mental Health Association.

How do I help a friend, family member, acquaintance or co-worker who I believe is experiencing a mental health problem?

Being aware of the signs and symptoms of someone experiencing a mental health problem is the first step. Mental Health First Aid Canada, which is based on the model of medical first aid, teaches participants how to help someone showing signs of a mental health problem or experiencing a mental health crisis.

One of the ways you can help someone who you think is experiencing a mental health problem is encourage them to seek professional help. Encourage them to see a family doctor, a psychologist, or a qualified mental health therapist.

Another way to help someone experiencing a mental health problem is to simply listen non-judgmentally and reassure them that you will help them get the appropriate help.

B. Definition Matching

The words in italics on the next page are taken from the reading. These words are also found on the list of the first 2000 most commonly used words of English and on the Academic Word List. Match the words to the correct definition and find the part of speech. The first one has been done for you as an example.

Collocations of the word “fire” are truck and fighter – “fire truck” and “fire fighter” for example. Use online reference sites such as www.thesaurus.com or www.dictionary.com, or www.learnersdictionary.com to find the collocations of “mental” and “physical”. Complete the table below. The first one has been done for you as an example.

Reading Strategy

Identifying the main idea

The selection is divided into sections and each section has a heading. You will notice that there are several sentences in a section. One sentence states the main idea of that section. The main idea of a section can be found in a sentence that tells us what that section is about. The other sentences in the section provide details and specific information to support the main idea. Read the selection again. As you read note down the sentence that states the main idea in the table provided below. The first one has been done for you as an example.

The sentences below are taken from the reading selection. Replace each highlighted word with its synonym in the correct word form. To do this you will need to identify the part of speech of the key word and then replace it with its synonym using the correct part of speech (and tense in the case of verbs). A list of synonyms has been provided for you but they are not necessarily in the correct word form. The first one has been done for you as an example.

Synonyms
Disturbance, looked for, imperfection, biggest, change, probable, definition, causes, undergo, pushing
Use the correct form of the synonym (verb, noun, adverb etc.) and the correct tense if it is a verb
